BIRMINGHAM, Ala. March 27, 1888.

ED. DEMOCRAT: Have been working here the past two weeks and concluded that is long enough, as the Sunny South has lost its charms somewhat lately. Owing to continual rains everything will be afloat should the weather continue, and my past experience has never met with the equal for mud at present. met with the equal for mud at present.
My intention was to go direct to Mexico, but in consideration of what I have heard from reliable men and personal observations I have concluded to undertake for a while prospecting in this country. I leave today for the mineral section and should there be any thing equal to what they claim, there will be a boom in that line here before long. The South is indeed a new South. A new life has been born here as it were and if no panic happens along before these industries become more generally known and patronized. There are dum-my lines here running in all directions and yesterday I went over several and took in everything possible in the line of observation and really surprised at the business of some of the enterprises. the business of some of the enterprises. I had quite a lengthy conversation with Mr. Kieser, Supt. of the Thomas Iron Co. They have about completed a large blast furnace and propose to commence on three more at once. They have large plants in Hokendauqua, Penn. Have been large producers of pigiron in the past but Southern inducements such as rich ore and cheap fuel has brought them South. By the way Mr. Kieser is a brother of Henry Kieser, formerly a Canton boy. Base ball has become very popular and quiet a number of northern teams have played here of late. There seems to be an under current here in some of the largest der current here in some of the largest works to reduce the number of men employed similar to the north of late. employed similar to the north of the Just why it is seems to be a mystery, whether the coming election has its old time effect seems to be the cause around here. Hoping the signs of winter in Canton are disappearing not again to return for months, as I can again to return for months, as I can sympathize with you fellows hugging those steamless pipes, with kind regards to all, I remain, as ever. Truly Yours, J. W. HECKERT.

Washington, April 5.—[Special.]—Mrs. Marie Wright, a well known correspondent of this city, was saved from a violent death or grave injury by President Cleveland's heroism. While out riding near Oak View, the President's country place, yesterday morning, her horse became unmanageable. Taking the bit in his teeth he dashed up the road towards "Red Top," making every effort to unseat his rider. Mrs. Wright's strength was fast deserting her, and a serious accident seemed im-minent, when from a little lane leading into the woods were seen President and Secretary Fairchild on horseback. Taking in the situation at a glance, the Chief Executive put the spurs to his horse, and like a knight of old, galloped to the rescue of the woman. With a short and perilous step he drew up in front of the now frantic beast, upon which Mrs. Wright was struggling. This action seemed to madden gling. This action seemed to madden

MARIETTA, O., April 7.—The centennial relebration opened here Thursday night most auspiciously.

The town was richly decorated and was filled with distinguished guests. The states of Connecticut, Massachusetts, Illinois, Inliana, Michigan and Wisconsin had official commissioners and representative present, There was a fine display of rare and historic relies and American antiquities, if Gen. Rufus Putnam, Gen. Benjamin Tupper and Rev. Manassah Cutler could walk in to-day on the colony which they fou ded 100 years ago, they would be forcibly impressed with the conviction that they builded better than they knew.

The fronts of the handsome business blocks and fine residences are gay with tri-colored and fine residences are gay with fri-colored bunting; flags wave, crowds of people throng the streets, and where 100 years ago the brave Putnam and his fearless band of forty-eight companions heard only the cry of wild creatures, the sigh of the wind through the mighty forests, or the murmur of the waves of the Muskingum and Ohio as they swept around the boats of the strange visitors and hurried on to carry the prophetic tidings to the Mississippi, to-day the air is ringing with exultant music from a hundred bands, and exultant music from a numers mands, and echoing with voices of such numbers as not even the "great towns" of the east could congregate in those olden times.

The initial exercises were held in the town hall, and consisted of a short speech by F. C. Sessions, president of the Ohio Archmogleal society, and an address on "The Building by the form of the Ohio Cov. of Chircins." the State," by Judge Joseph Cox, of Cincin-nati. The judge sketched the history of the famous ordinance of 1757, and traced the rise of the spirit of colonization from the officers of the revolution who set on foot the move nent to found a territory in the great west.
